President Invites Nations Ike Rejects To Check "Clean" Bomb

U.S. Continues Ready To Halt Nuclear Tests

President Eisenhower said today that if this country ever tests another big nuclear bomb be will invite "any country in the world" to be on hand and see for itself that radioactive fallout has been reduced toward the vanishing Eisnhower also told a news conference his scientific advisers favor telling the Russians or anyone else exactly how to make a "clean" bomb once this country proves it knows how.

The President spoke out firmly and with a touch of indignation in denying the United States has grown a bit half-hearted in seeking disarmament agreement with the Russians since U.S. scientists have said a hydrogen bomb completely "clean" of fallout can be developed.

Eisenhower declared his administration will "always" stand by its offer to try for a suspension of nuclear tests-even though, he said, there would be scientific advantage in continuing to test such

Civil Rights Referendum

No Constitutional Provisions Made For Russell's Idea

WASHINGTON, July 3 (A) President Eisenhower today rejected the idea that he submit his civil rights bill to nationwide referendum. He said he didn't know of any provisions in the Constitution for putting the question up to the people in such a way.

He told his news conference he thought that "the Constitution contemplates that there are responsible officials within the federal government that have to act in such cases.

The President expressed his views when asked about the proposal of Sen. Russell (D-Ga) to submit the civil rights issue to a national vote. The Georgian said yesterday that if the people became acquainted with the bill now before the Senate they would defeat it "overwhelmingly."

No Provision, Ike Says

First of all, Eisenhower said he didn't know of any constitutional provision for such a referendum. He also said he didn't know how the question could be put, unless the voters were confronted with the specific language of the bills -"and I doubt that that would make a very good subject for a referendum, even if you could have one

IN A FLAT BOTTOM TUB the water, as it is forced away from the agitator, strikes the perpendicular side walls of the tub and in doing so is retarded. The straight side walls throw the water straight back and thus reduce the overall velocity of the water action. Slower water action means slower washing speed.

IN THE SPEED QUEEN BOWLSHAPED TUB, as the water is forced away from the agitator, it glides up the smooth, rounding corners of the bowl without reducing the velocity of the agitated water. The result is the fastest washing speed developed in any washer.

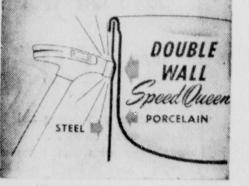

DOUBLE WALL PROTECTION AND ECONOMY, KEEPS WATER HOT!

Speed Queen's double wall construction also provides an armor of steel around the porcelain tub to protect the porcelain against any possible injury. A child's playful hammer might mar the exterior finish but could not damage the vital porcelain tub.

MOST WASHERS are of single-wall construction as shown above. The porcelain tub is always exposed to possible damage.

Great Words And Ideas For Today

The Declaration of Independence held a number of truths to be self-evident. Among them, it said, is the truth that all men are created equal, are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, and that among these rights are life, liberty and the pursuit of happi-

It said further that to insure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the gov-

Those were great and eloquent words. They clothed great ideas. Perhaps the greatest idea that found expression there was the one holding that governments are a means to an end and that the powers they wield are theirs only because the people who are governed consent to

That concept was utterly at odds with the idea expressed in the phrase "the divine right

The authors of the Declaration of Independence were well aware of this conflict between philosophies. They were conscious of the fact that they had been British subjects, owing certain duties to their king, but they were careful to make the point that they were standing on rights all men were entitled to enjoy.

They argued that the king had obligations to fulfill towards them-and that, as he had not met them, they were no longer bound to

It was 181 years ago that the Declaration of Independence was formally adopted by the Continental Congress. The words still ring, now as then. Americans can honor those who made that great document a charter of human liberty if they read it again and rededicate themselves to its principles.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

The Fourth Of July

It used to be the custom for the great, the near tices of the high court shall hold its for greatness to appear on buntingdraped platforms to deliver a Fourth of July oration. The custom went out with the popularity of the automobile and the radio; the former produced the long weekend on the road; the latter the commentaries and news reports by professionals, many of whom avoid opinions because no matter how you put it, an opinion * can be controversial.

The older custom was better because it brought the neighbors together and therefore stimulated moral approval or indignation. Most of the occasions resulted in moral indignation which is essential in a free society. To remain free, a people must often be angry and they must be angry against their own officials. In this United States, such indignation is usually impersonal because few of us know our politicians and many would not care to know some. But indignation is good for the soul and the ancient adage, "Throw the scoundrels out!" applies to even one's best friends in public

This year, the most controversial department of government is the Supreme Court, a public agency generally regarded as sacrosanct although not always so. Some of the justices have been outstanding juristicscholars but there have been several political scoundrels on the Supreme Court bench so that the word, sacrosanct, does not apply to it any more than to the Presidency or to Congress. When the division of powers is clear-cut, the authority and cleanliness of the bench

President Eisenhower has appointed four justices to the Supreme Court, Warren, Harlan, Brennan and Whittaker. Warren was Governor of California, a politician of enormous magnitude who managed to get both Republican and Democratic votes and who really was not dependent upon either party, although he ealled himself a Republican and controlled the party machine in his state.

Warren was a candidate for President in 1952 and stood between Eisenhower and Taft. Both sides courted him. When it was clear that Warren could not be nominated, both sides offered him a Supreme Court appointment-the first opening-if he did not flip the California delegation to the other side. It may be recalled that California held out to the bitter end when Eisenhower's nomination was certain. Meanwhile, Richard Nixon had broken away from the California reservation and was made Vice President. When the shooting was over, Warren held the respect of the Eisenhower and Taft elements in the Republican Party and he got the first opening on the Supreme Court bench which was the Chief Justiceship.

Except as District Attorney in Alameda County from 1925 to 1939, and State Attorney General, Warren has had no experience as a lawyer or a judge. His forte is political manipulation and state administration.

Brennam has been a judge in New Jersey. He is a Democrat and a Roman Catholic and was appointed for those reasons, it being regarded as politically fortuitous at the moment to appoint such a one to the Supreme Court bench. No one, not even Brennan, has ever been able to explain how among the numerous Roman Catholics and Democrats of the United States, he happened to be the one tagged. The last political act of Joe McCarthy before he died was to oppose the appointment of this obscure New Jersey judge to the Supreme Court of the United States.

There must be other appointments in the near uture. Justice Felix Frankfurter, the remaining intellectual of the Holmes-Brandeis magnitude on the bench, is 74 years old. He apparently hangs on as an act of patriotism to prevent another unfortunate appointment. Whoever does the selecting of such men for President Eisenhower is more the politician than a jurist and the Senate apparently dropped dead.

This would have made a wonderful Fourth of July oration of the old type, in the course of which moral indignation could rise high on the one hand and on the other hand, that is, pro and con. For that was the joy of ancient American life—that is as long ago as 40 or 50 years-that there was always a pro and a con and nobody worried too much about which side he took, as long as he had a good argument with his neighbor who liked him because he was an "argufier." Them were the days!

A Supreme Court Justice Can Be Removed

This question has arisen lately because of the extreme nature of some of the decisions of the high court which substantially impair the investigative operations of Congress and the prosecution of

It may come as a surprise to many people to find that justices of the Supreme Court of the United States are not assured of life tenure and that nowhere in the Constitution are the words "life tenure" used. Actually the Constitution simply says that jusoffice only "during good beha-

The Constitution provides for "impeachment" of judges, but solely for "treason, bribery and other high crimes and misdemeanors." In the event, however, that the justices do not commit any such crimes but go beyond their proper judicial functions and actually destroy the right of the nation to protect itself against subversion, can anything be done about it? Strangely enough, in the entire history of the Supreme Court there never has been a case involving a definition of the words "good behavior" in connection with any Supreme Court justice. Nor has there been any case in which the power of removal of high court justices has been ruled upon. This correspondent the other day recalled the stir made by the famous Myers case in October 1926, and took occasion to reread the decision because in its 50,000 words is given the most exhaustive discussion of the removal powers of Congress ever presented by the Supreme Court.

But this case and the decision in the Humphrey case in 1935-repudiating the President's rediscussions in the early days of of a member of the Fedthe republic and since then have eral Trade Commission-are conrelated primarily to whether the inici targely to the question of Senate has to be consulted about removals. It seems to be an eshow far Congress may by law restrict the removal powers of tablished fact that for many the Chief Executive with respect years the Congress asserted its to executive and quasi-judicial right to participate in the reposts. information.

It seems logical to concludeas Justices Brandeis, Holmes and McReynolds plainly asserted in their dissent in the Myers case -that the power resides in Congress to control removals by stipulating in a law the basis for such removal.

Hence, if Congress chose to define "good behavior" and provided by law that the President and the Senate could jointly decide on the removal of any or all of the Supreme Court justices and then other justices were nominated and confirmed to replace them, there is enough legislative power vested inCongress to make the action stick despite any attempt by the courts to interfere. For Congress also has the right, specifically given by the Constitution, to determine the "ap pellate jurisdiction" of the Supreme Court. Through a law of this kind, Congress could prevent any review of its own statutory definition of the phrase "good behavior."

So justices of the Supreme Court can be ousted whenever Congress and a President jointly decide to take that action to protect the country from erratic or irresponsible decisions by a majority of the high court. "Life tenure" is a custom-not an absolute assurance of tenure for Supreme Court justices. And "custom" has been overturned in decisions in more instances in the 20 years since the so-called "liberals" took over the Supreme Court than in all the 148 prior years of judicial history.

> CHINESE REPORT ON U. S. RETREAT-On Jan. 31, 1951, I published the partial text of a captured Chinese combat bulletin giving the enemy's secret estimate of American fighting ability. The report was humiliating to the United States in that it pointed to U.S. inefficiency and lack of morale. However, it revealed nothing to the enemy, since the enemy wrote it.

On the other hand, it pointed to weaknesses which the United States had to cure if it was to win in Korea. The United States has always operated on the theory that it could not only take criticism but benefit from it.

MacARTHUR'S INTELLIGEN-CE-On Dec. 30, 1950, I published to diagnose the columns to which extracts from Gen. MacArthur's own intelligence reports on the size of the Chinese army which were at wide variance with his own public statements regarding the size of the Chinese army.

MacArthur, in trying to alibi his retreat from North Korea, stated on Dec. 2 that there were about 500,000 Chinese troops in Korea. On Dec. 4 he upped his estimate to more than one million Chinese in Korea or on the border. On Dec. 15, he announced that "a bottomless well of Chinese Communist manpower continues to flow into Korea.

I had reported that the Chinese forces were nowhere near as great as MacArthur claimed, only to be met with MacArthur's own official denials

Therefore, on Dec. 30, I published excerpts from the reports of MacArthur's own intelligence chief, Gen. Charles Willoughby, estimating on Dec. 6, two days after MacArthur's million-man announcement, that there were only 96,000 Chinese opposite the UN 8th Army. I also published Gen. Willoughby's report: "Lack of CCF (Chinese army) on 8th Army front due to keep withdrawal executed by 8th Army, it is evident that enemy, lacking any great degree of mobility, has been unable to regain contact.'

This, in military language, meant that the Chinese, lacking transportation (mobility) has been unable to keep up with the fast retreat of the 8th Army. In other words, MacArthur's troops, according to his own intelligence officer, had run too fast. Mr. Wright states that this revealed secrets to the enemy. It was published one month after the enemy knew all too well about the most ignominious retreat in American military history, but when the American people had not yet grasped the full portent of that retreat.

Incidentally, the above Willoughby report was published only after checking with a top Pentagon spokesman to make sure no military security would be breached. RIDGWAY'S PROMOTION -On April 30, 1951, I published an abbreviated exchange of cables between the Pentagon and Gen. MacArthur in Tokyo in which Washington notified MacArthur that it planned to promote Gen. Matthew Ridgway, newly appointed Korean combat commander, to be a full general; and in which MacArthur opposed his promotion. This column, which Mr. Wright complains about, revealed nothing more than military politics.

LESS CONSUMER GOODS -On Dec. 4, 1951, I published the minutes of a meeting at the Office of Defense Mobilization at which it was argued that the production of refrigerators, autos and other consumer goods might have to be curtailed. I quoted production chief Manly Fleischmann: "If the production of consumers durable goods is reduced more than an additional ten per cent, it will be necessary to convert entirely to defense." This revealed that the American public might have to tighten its belt, but it gave no secrets to an ene-

KOREAN PRISON RIOTS-On May 17, 1952, after Gen. Francis Dodd had been captured by rioting north Koreans on Koje Island, I published the teletyped bawling out which Gen. Omar Bradley sent to Gen. Mark Clark and Gen. Charles Colson for letting the prisoners get out of hand. The riots were already front-page news. The fact that Bradley acted promptly and indignantly was healthy for the American people

Subsequently, on Aug. 14, 1953, received a letter from Gen. Bradley as he retired as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff: "As I look back over the past eight years I think of the many times you and your assistant Jack Anderson have had our interests at heart and in this way have contributed to my getting my job done.

Apparently he would not agree with Mr. Wright.

This year the Defense Department wrote a similar letter of appreciation for the cooperation of my office in submitting a copy of the now famous Nickerson memo on guided missiles in order to make certain nothing in it would breach national secur-
